Select Committee of the House of Commons on Colonial Military Expenditure.

We alluded recently to the new policy inaugurated by the Imperial Parliament respecting colonial military expenditure. A part of the report of the Select Committee has reached us in the Montreal Heraldthat part which most immediately affects British America. The conclusion arrived at by the committee from the evidence laid before them is:

before them is:

"That it is inexpedient that the proportions of cost of Colonial defence to be borne by the Imperial and Colonial Governments respectively should be subject of negotiation with the various dependencies, but that evidence has been given tending to show that the mode of proceeding adopted by Lord Grey in 1851, in announcing to the Australian Colonies the terms on which alone Imperial troops could be sent there, may be gradually applied to other dependencies."

Such being their conclusions we may as well take a glance at the evidence. In the portion of the report before us, we find the evidence of four statesmen—T. F. Elliot, Assistant Under Secretary for the Colonies; J. R. Godley, Assistant Under Secretary of State for War; Earl Grey; H. Merivale, Under Secretary for India; and the Duke of Newcastle. Mr. Elliot states the number of Imperial troops in Canada to be 3,118, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, 2,196, Newfoundland, 209. Total, 5,523. Canada was first informed in 1851, that the troops will be reduced and if any further force. was first informed in 1851, that the troops would be reduced, and if any further force was required that it would have to be provided from colonial funds. In 1854, during the Crimean war, similar dispatches were sent out. The Canadians assented, and expressed a willingness to assist the Home Government in that struggle. A proposition was also lately made to Queensland to pay the soldiers or raise. the soldiers or raise a local corps; but that colony deprecated raising a local corps. Whether they assented to pay the soldiers, Mr. Elliot does not state. Yet they warmly Mr. Elliot does not state. Yet they warmly urged the continuance of the soldiers in the

M. Godley thought that if the garrisons were withdrawn, Canada would detend herself against foreign aggression. If they did not defend the forts, they should be abandoned by England. He thought that if negotiations were entered into with the different Colonles to meet military expenditure that they would not consent. They would protest against the change, and probably refuse to negotiate. Because Canada was more exposed to aggression than Australia, was no reason why she should have a greater claim to Imperial aid. He further stated that the first responsibility of M. Godley thought that if the garrisons a greater claim to Imperial aid. He further stated that the first responsibility of defence rested with the Colonies; then England could bestow what aid she liked The Colonies should be so informed, no matter what the consequences, whether it changed their attachment or not.

It will be seen from the condensed testing these two witnesses that Canada.

mony of these two witnesses that Canada, mony of these two witnesses that Canaca, felt willing to assist the Mother Country in 1854, and that now it should be the fixed policy of England, "the only practical course," to tell Canada with other colonies just what aid they might expect for defence Mr. Merivale, however, thought the 5,500 troops in the British American colonies were troops in the british American counters where left there for fear of the United States and "for no other reason; and if such a proposition was made to them as was made to Australia they would resent it. The Australian colotney would resent it. Ine Australian colonies have no apprehension of a foreign power; but Canada has. In the event of a war between England and the United States, Canada would think that a war in which she Detween England and the United States, Canada would think that a war in which she was not a principal, and, consequently England ought to take care of her." Mr. Merivale also states that when the San Juan Island question looked like war, many Canadians said "this is no concern of ours at all." And if Canada was left to protect herself, she would say: "We claim to be the regulators of our own foreign policy." He thought Canada had not the slightest interest in the San Juan question. When the question was asked Mr. Merivale whether there was "danger in the general proposition of one country making wars and another paying for them?" He said it was a choice of swils. But from his testimony it is sufficiently clear that, in his opinion, the colonies of North America would become independent soon after the Imperial troops dependent soon after the Imperial troops were withdrawa; and from his intimate knowledge of them during his service in the knowledge of them during his service in the Colonial offices the probability is that he forms a tolerably correct judgment.

Earl Grey, formerly Colonial Secretary, in his evidence seemed to favor keeping up colonial connection. In his opinion "the connection of colonial relations implies provery notion of colonial relations implies bro-tection," and that the rule he applied to Aus-tralia could not be applied to some other colonies. If we can believe him, it would be better for England to blow up all her colonial fortifications-certainly not be better for England to blow up all her colonial fortifications—certainly not build any more. Nevertheless, he thought Quebec, Halifax and Kingston useful fortresses, and as England had to keep up an army they might just as well be garrisoned as to keep the selders at home. When asked whether the colonies ought to pay if a war occurred through colonial relations, he replied that it depended on circumstances.

The last witness, the Duke of Newcastle, was subjected to a long examination. Although he denied that one rigid rule could be applied to all the Colonies; yet, he said, there was "no doubt Colonies ought to contribute in some form or other to their defence." Whilst the Duke is opposed to electing any more fortifications in North America, he expressed himself clearly in favor of continuing the garrisons. He even said that he could not imagine a time when a less number of troops could be left in North America than there is now. If saked to continue to their military expenditure, British America would not do it; and England hall no way of enforcing such a demand. This answereymently formed the ground-work on America would not do it; and England had no way of enforcing such a demant. This answer evidently formed the ground-work on which the Committee reported that it was in-expedient fonegotiate with the colonies to aid

THE BRITISH COLONIST in their defence. We find that the Duke of Newcastle was very careful about committing lewcastle was very careful about committin himself on the question of the Federation of the British American Colonies. Beyond the facilities it would give for the construction of milways, he seemed disinclined to exof railways, he seemed disinclined to express an opinion in favor of federation being a means to tax the provinces for military expenditure. Taking the evidence of the Duke as a whoie, in respect to British America, it is simply this: He is in favor of keeping up the colonial connection, but don't expect the easternt provinces to contribute a cent. As a matter of course, we may conclude that the keeping of garrisons at Openhee Halifay or Kingston are more for conclude that the keeping of garrisons at Quebec. Halifax, or Kingston, are more for Imperial objects than colonial ones. In fact, he admits that fear of some aggressive measure on the part of the United States is measure on the part of the United States is a chief reason for keeping troops in Cannda.

A few issues back we referred to the passage of a resolution in the flouse of Commons on colonial military expenditure, inaugurating the doctrine that for internal order and security the colonies should wholly provide, and also aid in their external defence, but excepting from the rule such colonies. provide, and also aid in their external defence, but excepting from the rule such colonies as Gibraltar and Malta, that are kept up for purely Imperial purposes. Such a policy having been established by Parliament, military expenditure in British North America will resolve itself simply into this: Is it necessary to keep up garrisons at Halifax, Quebec, or Victoria, for Imperial purposes solely?" If it is, they will be kept up. If not, they will be withdrawn. For although Parliament may hold the colonies liable, wholly for internal and partly for external defence, yet if we believe the Duke of Newcastle, as we do, the Provinces, though loyal, will not tax themselves in their dependent position, and England cannot enforce the will not tax themselves in their dependent position, and England cannot enforce the collection of a tax. To open negotiations with them is to meet a negative—a refusal to pay the expenses of a war that another country has contracted. Besides this, when Responsible Government was conceded to British America the bargain with England, as we understand it, was that in return for guaranteeing a Civil List to the Crown, the latter handed over to the Colofor return for guaranteeing it contains the latter handed over to the Colonies the entire management of their own internal affairs. Now, if a inflitting tax is asked, it will be regarded as re-opening the bargain. This the Colonies will strenuously

Mail to Cariboo.

We have waited patiently for some time to see whether Government would establish a postal route to Cariboo; but notwithstanding the assurances of our cotemporaries that it had been resolved on, there has been no public intimation given confirming it. If there has been any intimation at all, it has been mere talk so far. What we want is been mere talk so far. What we want is something more practical. We want to see the announcement when the mails will be made up. Till we see such a notice at our post office or in the public prints we shall write down the Government as behind the age in postal matters as in all others. We have now advanced into June. From now till December, more than any other senson of the year, postal facilities with the interior will be required. Yet everybody is placed at the mercy of the express companies for the transmission of every kind of unail matter; and either have to pay high rates for the transmission of every kind of unail mat-ter; and either have to pay high rates for letters and newspapers, or go without them. It is literally too bad to be thus pestered; cut off from all connection with Cariboo, by a dilatory government.

Brutal Treatment of Passengers Certain officers attached to the steamships Orizaba and Panama, plying between Panama and San Francisco, have long been in the habit of brutally maltreating and insulting many of their passengers. Every indignity or insult which can be invested by these against a contract of the contra be invented by these petty tyrants for the annoyand of those who have placed themselves temporaril in their hands, is practiced upon many of the passengers, practices which, if repeated ashore, woul entitle the noses of the perpetrators to such tweat ings as would learn them better manners in future if not make better men of them generally. The men, or their masters of the Pacific Mai Steamship Company, need a lesson—one which will reach the very bottom of their purses—be fore they need be expected to improve, and we earnestly hope they will not want that lesson long Following is an expression of indignation at treatment received by the passengers on the las up-trip of the Orizaba. It speaks for itself:

up-trip of the Orizaba. It speaks for itself:

We the undersigned, passengers on board the Pacific Mail Company's Steamer "Orizaba," desire to express our indignation at the treatment we have received, both individually and collectively, since embarking on board the above-named vessel at Panama, on the 10th May.

First—At the way in which the luggage was indigued, it being thrown from the dock of the lighter on to the steamer, a distance of 8 or 10 feet, the only thing preventing it from falling on the planks being a sirgle swab. Some of the boxes were broken and the contents thrown about the hold, very few of them ecaping damage more or less.

Secondly—That whereas the steamer is only sufficient for about 250 in case of accident; and the crowded state of the vessel occasioned great danger of fever breaking out.

vessel occasioned great danger of fever breaking out.

Thirdly—At the gross incivility we have received from the officers and crew, being cursed and even personally abused and struck without any just cause. This applies more particularly to the Purser and Chief Mate.

Fourthly—The food at times was quite insufficient in quantity: the supply of water for washing purposes was very small for first class, and some at all for 2nd and 3d class passengers, the latter having to draw salt water for themselves.

Fifthly—The sleeping accommodation was disgraceful, men and women being huddled together without any regard to decency. Hundreds have had only cauvas stretchers, without pillow, matrass, or blanket, and many had to sleep on deck, having no betths.

Sixthly—No surgeon was provided free of charge, as is usual in passenger ships, the one on board charging for every consultation, and $1 for every dose of medicine. On one particular case of emergency he was not to be found all night, and thad there not been some medical gentlemen passengers on board no relief could have been afforded to the patiant.

We request that this protest may have insertion

AT SEA, 2d June, 1862.

WIVES FOR OUR BACHELORS .- The " British Female Emigrant Society," taking pity on the forlorn condition of our bachelor residents, are about sending them an invoice of English girls on the screw steamship Tynemouth, which, at last accounts, was on the berth at London for Victoria, V. I. The ship will be provided with respectable matrons, who will instruct the girls while en voyage in needlework, reading, writing, &c.,-and, we hope, (to those who never learned ashore), cooking, ironing, washing, taking care of babies, and other useful household duties, a thorough knowledge of which will be found indispensable before they can pass muster as wives here.
The expectation of the Society sending them out The expectation of the Society sending them took that her will find husbands immediately on their arrival at this port. Maybe they wont; but we sincerely hope that if in every way deserving of good husbands they will not have to remain single an hour after setting foot ashore. There are any number of young and old bachclors in the two Colonies whose forlern appearance seems like a standing advertisement in a daily newspaper of "a wife wanted." Such persons, if they don't embrace the opportunity that will be held out to them when the Tynemouth gets in should thereafter be taxed heavily for the luxnry of leading a life of single blessedness. The fortunate consignee of the precious freight is not stated; but it is presumed that Selim Franklin, Esq. M. P. P., the well-known advocate of female immigration (himsel' a bachdor), will be selected to do the agreeable towards the ladles for at least the first few days after their arrival. When the Tynemouth is reported as coming around Race Rocks, what a rush there will be for good clothes! is that they will find husbands immediately on

IRON-PLATED SHIPS NOWHERE .- The British Government has concluded to proceed with the land fortifications, since it has been found that iron placed ships are not invulnerable. The experiment with Sir Wm. Armstrong's new 300pounder, unrifled, has resulted successfully. A round shot of 156 pounds, fired from his new gun, with a charge of fifty pounds of powder, broke with a charge of fifty pounds of powder, broke through the iron plates and teak timbers of the Warrior as easily as a musket ball goes through a spine heard. Had either the Monitor or Merrimae put powder enough in their guns the other wauld have been demolished. Iron plates are practically good for nothing, except against common 12 or 20-pound charges. As now advised, it appears that no ship can be made to carry an armor so thick that a gun on another ship will not penetrate it. No ship can be built that another cannot run to and destroy. It is a question of power, speed, and skill. The old navies, of course, are all swept from the seas. Practically, they might as well be at the bottom of the ocean. Their only use is to converted into floating batterios.

WHAT TRASK !- The San Francisco Herald says what hour is selling at Cariboo for $6 per pound. Ho! FOR THE STICKEEN GOLD MINES .- Capt J. Nagle & Co. have placed on the berth for Stickeen a first-class steamer-one of the best sea boats in the Northern waters-and will dispatch her at an early day, provided 100 passengers can be obtained at the low fare of $2 apiece. Each passenger will be allowed to carry 200 pounds of provisions and tools. The steamer will touch at Bentinck Arm on the passage up, and thus enable parties destined for Cariboo via the coast route to obtain speedier means of water transit than has been heretofore engaged. It is believed that in the the trip to Stickeen and back the time consumed will not exceed ten days; and we understand that the names of 30 gold-hunters are already booked

FROM BRITISH COLUMBIA.—The steamer Enterprise arrived from New Westminster yesterday afternoon with 15 passengers and a small amounof treasure. No later news has been received from Cariboo, and no miners are as yet reported on their way down. Stocks of provisions at Lil-loet and Lytton are accumulating; business is brisk. The wagon-road on the second portage, Harrison-Lillooet trail, is nearly completed and laden wagons are passing over it Nine of the laden wagons are passing over it camels are packing from Seaton Lake to Lillcoet Flat; the remainder are at Bridge River.

THE FORTHCOMING INTERNATIONAL PUGIL-ISTIC MATCH.—Heenan has arrived in London and has been challenged by Jem Mace, the Champion bruiser of England. The "illustrious" American, however, does not seem disposed to American, nowever, does not seem disposed come to time at present, and is fighting shy of the match for reasons best known to himself. He is under an engagement to travel with a Circus Company through the United Kingdom and exhibit his muscle. The London Star says that if Heenan and Mace are suffered to encounter each other it will be a national disgrace.

The persons in attendance numbered about 100, and at the conclusion of the services an excellent collation was partaken of.

CAUSES OF INSANITY .- The following is an extract from the annual report of the Medical Superintendent of the Royal Edinburgh Lunatic Asylum :

"Intemperance figures as the most fre-quent exciting cause of insanity. It has always done so in the reports of this asylum, but with diminishing frequency every year, being the ascribed cause in only 7 per cent of the cases admitted last year, while it was being the ascribed cause in only 7 per cent of the cases admitted last year, while it was the cause assigned in from 20 to 25 per cent of the cases ten years ago. Religious excitement was a frequent cause during the past year, and in several of the cases it was ascribed to attendance on revival meetings. Domestic affliction is the cause next in order in point of frequency. The facilities with which relapses may be engendered was illustrated in one case, where the subject of it, formerly an inmate of the asylum, was suppresed to have relapsed in consequence of the sympathetic influence occasioned by his witnessing, during his agricultural pursuits on the side of the Pentland Hills, a pic-nic party from the Institution enjoying themselves at their worted sports. In another case, the insanity was ascribed to terrors caused in a lady by getting out of a railway train at the wrong station, and having, at some risk, to jump in again while the train was in notion. A slighter cause even than this may be sufficient to develop insanity, if we can trust the account given of another case admitted, in which the worry, pain, and irritation occurred by a straw having been forced under the finger nail produced mental derangement. In another case the insanity was ascribed to some clinical remarks made in the hospital to the surrounding students, upon the disease under which the female labored, in her presence, which she interpreted as implying that her case was hopeless." selves at their wonted sports. THE OLD AND NEW AMERICAN CORRES-FONDENTS OF THE LONDON "TIMES."—A A London paper states that Dr. Charles Mackay, the pupular poet, is to succeed Mr. Russell as the special war correspondent in America of the London Times. Mr. Mackay has been here for several weeks. He is

has been here for several weeks. He is known to have strong secession proclivities, he having last winter presided over a sympathizing meeting which was held somewhere in the vicinity of Liverpool.

Russell, by the way, is likely on his arrival home to meet with a storm, the first mutterings of which are already discernible in the London papers. That little despatch counselling his friend in this city to "act as if he had heard some very good news." counseling his triend in this city to wact as if he had heard some very good news," seems to have opened the eyes of the British stock-jobbing public to the motives which prompted the Doctor's disparaging accounts of the Federal position, and hence the parties who, putting faith in the specials of the London Times, were led thereby to sacrifice their American and Canadian stocks, are their American and Canadian stocks, are now pouring out their wrath upon the journal and its venal correspondent. It is estimated that the loss occasioned to holders of these stocks by the letter of Russell, which imme-diately preceded the announcement of the amicable settlement of the Trent affair, amounted to several hundreds of thousands amounted to several numerous of the victims puts down his loss on Canadian stocks at £100. The suspected complicity of Lord Lyons with Russell is also dwelt upon, and a Parliamentary investigation called for. There hamentary investigation called for. There is, however, no better authority for dragging the British Minister into the scrape than is furnished in an editorial on the subject appeared in the New York Herald ac the time.

Dear Friend:—I write to let you know that I arrived here, after thirty days hard travel, being eight days in the Blue Mountains. There have been more than three hundred men left here already, who give a very hard account of the diggings. We met them in Grand Rond. They discouraged a great many more, and came very near turning them back, when I told them I was going through if I had to go alone; they then made up their minds to go with me. We arrived and found things all right. Griffen and Seriver took out 26 dollars on Monday, and Littlefield & Co. took out 7 ounces on Saturday. * R. B. Gilbs.
